THE DEFINITION OF SEND

A child has SEND if they have a learning difficulty or disability which calls for special educational provision to be made for him or her.

A child has a learning difficulty or disability if he or she:

- has a significantly greater difficulty in learning than the majority of others of the same age, or
- has a disability which prevents or hinders him or her from making use of the facilities provided for others of the same age in the Partnership schools

Many children who have SEN may have a disability under the Equality Act 2010 – that is ‘...a physical or mental impairment which has a long-term and substantial adverse effect on their ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities’. ‘Long-term’ is defined as ‘a year or more’ and ‘substantial’ is defined as ‘more than minor or trivial’. This definition includes sensory impairments such as those affecting sight or hearing, and long-term health conditions such as asthma, diabetes, epilepsy, and cancer. Children with chronic health conditions do not necessarily have SEN, but may have individual learning needs. There is also a significant overlap between disabled children and those with SEN. Where a disabled child requires special educational provision they will also be covered by the SEN definition.

The aims of this policy are:

Where this is the case the teacher should still retain responsibility for the student. They should work closely with any Teaching Assistant or specialist staff involved, to plan and assess the impact of support and interventions and how they can be linked to classroom teaching. Teachers should use appropriate assessment to set targets which are deliberately ambitious. Potential areas of difficulty should be identified and addressed at the outset, this must also involve parents and carers, so as to allow implementation of a joint learning approach at home. These include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • providing support for children who need help with communication, language and literacy; • planning to develop children's understanding through the use of all their senses and of varied experiences; • helping children to manage their behaviour and to take part in learning effectively and safely; • helping individuals to manage their emotions, particularly trauma or stress, and to take part in learning; Lessons should be planned to address any potential areas of difficulty and to remove barriers to student achievement. In many cases, such planning will mean that students with SEND will be able to study the full National Curriculum

Students	Children are required to engage in the review-plan-do cycle (at an appropriate level for their age and development) and provide evidence of their progress towards the targets set. Children are involved at an appropriate level in setting own targets through the RAP.

WORKING WITH OTHER AGENCIES

The Partnership may involve specialists at any point to advise them on early identification of SEND and effective support and interventions. The student's parents and carers will always be involved in any decision to involve specialists. The involvement of specialists and what was discussed or agreed should be recorded and shared with the parents and carers and teaching staff supporting the child in the same way as other SEND support. Every effort will be made to access external advice and support swiftly. The Local Offer, published by Somerset County Council and available on its website, details the range of support available.

COMPLAINTS

Initially any complaint about the level of provision for any child with SEND should be addressed through the SENCO. If the issue is not resolved then the complaint should be raised with the Headteacher. The School Complaints Procedure, available from the school office gives details of the process if there is a need to escalate to Governors. Parents and carers also have the right to go to the local authority if they consider the school is not meeting their child's needs.

Appendix 1

The Equality Act 2010 sets out the legal obligations that schools, early years providers, post-16 institutions, local authorities and others have towards disabled children and young people:

- They must not directly or indirectly discriminate against, harass or victimise disabled children and young people

They must not discriminate for a reason arising in consequence of a child disability

- They must make reasonable adjustments, including the provision of auxiliary aids and services, to ensure that disabled children and young people are not at a substantial disadvantage compared with their peers. This duty is anticipatory – it requires thought to be given in advance to what disabled children and young people might require and what adjustments might need to be made to prevent that disadvantage

- Public bodies, including further education institutions, local authorities, maintained schools, maintained nursery schools, academies and free schools are covered by the public sector equality duty and, when carrying out their functions, must have regard to the need to eliminate discrimination, promote equality of opportunity and foster good relations between disabled and nondisabled children and young people. Public bodies also have specific duties under the public sector equality duty and must publish information to demonstrate their compliance with this general duty and must prepare and publish objectives to achieve the core aims of the general duty. Objectives must be specific and measurable. The general duty also applies to bodies that are not public bodies but that carry out public functions. Such bodies include providers of relevant early years education, non-maintained special schools, independent specialist providers and others making provision that is funded from the public purse.

The duties cover discrimination in the provision of services and the provision of education, including admissions and exclusions. All providers must make reasonable adjustments to procedures, criteria and practices and by the provision of auxiliary aids and services. Most providers must also make reasonable adjustments by making physical alterations. Schools and local authority education functions are not covered by this last duty, but they must publish accessibility plans (and local authorities, accessibility strategies) setting out how they plan to increase access for disabled students to the curriculum, the physical environment and to information.
